All –

I checked the forecast this morning and the storm has not veered inland enough along the NJ area to bring more than about ¾" of precipitation; and some of the precipitation is going to fall as snow. While they have not yet updated the hydrograph forecast since last night, I do not believe that the flows will be projected to increase as much as needed. Current high is still about 1,000 cfs shy.

We will NOT conduct the High Flow sampling event tomorrow.

Thank you all for your quick response, but we will aim for another day.

Kristen
